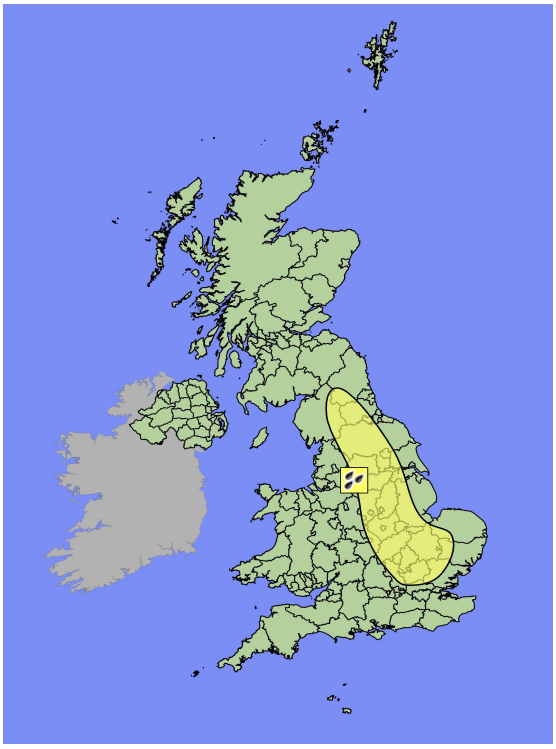
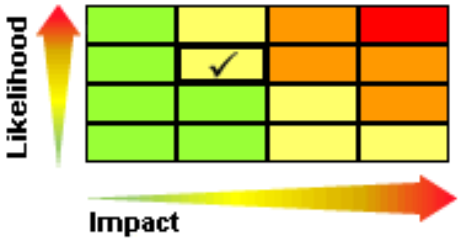
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A warm humid airmass is covering much of England. As a cold front moves slowly eastwards across some western areas of Britain today some heavy thundery downpours are likely to be triggered further to the east. Although many places will miss the downpours, where they do occur there is the possibility of 25mm of rain falling in an hour leading to localised surface water flooding.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 14:00 on Wed, 04th Jul 2012 until 23:55 on Wed, 04th Jul 2012

Scattered heavy thundery downpours are likely to affect parts of eastern, central and northern England on Wednesday afternoon and evening. The public should be aware that these could lead to localised surface water flooding and difficult driving conditions.
